Ah, ah you can't see my eyes, you can't see my eyes and they don't see yours hear me when i say i don't mind at all it's the rain that i hear coming not a stranger or a ghost the quiet of a storm approaching that i fear the most it's the pain that i hear coming the slightest crystal teardrops to the ground in silence when my love is near darling when did you fall when was it over darling when, when did you fall when was it over it's marching through my door now the stony cold of lonesome a bell tolls for my heart and then my lonesome song begins darling when did you cry i couldn't hear you darling when, when did you cry i couldn't hear you i suppose it is the price of falling in love

i suppose it is the price of falling in love ah, ah it's the rain that i hear coming not a stranger not a ghost the quiet of a storm approaching

a bell tolls for my heart and now my lonesome song will end darling when did we fall when was it over darling when, when did we fall when was it over

i suppose it is the price of falling in love i fear that it's the price of falling in love
