Musique : Dream Theater

Paroles : John Petrucci

Watching my window I was led like a child

As the roadway lamplights misguided my mind through the night a shadow of limits

We were racing the rain my hands held the wheel My eyes tried to hold their place there must have been a time when I thought that you were watching

It had to be when my senses lost control

I thought I'd slipped away
I thought I could still feel us moving

It must have been a cloud no bigger than a man's hand

Every reason I risk my life
To come back to you Is locked behind your door You're my immunity Outside I watched you burn Heavy hearts were bleeding
A cry for help, a familiar voice
My melting hands streaked the glass

As I walked away
I wondered what had really happened had I run out of time did I push myself too far As my last step fell I felt my hands upon the wheel had I come back to life or did I ever leave at all

In higher lives
We seem to be always a moment too late

The ones who help to set the sun - 2/2

We're past the time when we looked on
Now we're
THE ONES WHO HELP TO SET THE SUN
this time for real I locked the door behind me My mind was still a wreck from what I saw For when my hands are still I'll recognize the message never again will my senses lose
control
Now we're
