It's dark and I'm lonely.
So cold, so alone.
So much that I know now,
I should have known then.
But what does it matter,
I won't try again.
All I remember,
I wish I'd forget.
Never say never and that's what you get.
I tried to stall and took the fall,
wouldn't make the call,
now I've got nothing left at all.
I thought I'd win but I gave in I lost again,
now I've got nothing left at all.
Nothing's the matter,
it won't happen here.
You'd think you'd know better,
blind to the fear.
I've lost my religion,
lost all I believe in,
my memory's in shackles I'm down on my knees.
It's dark and I'm lonely.
So cold, so alone.
I tried to stall and took the fall,
wouldn't make the call,
now I've got nothing left at all.
I thought I'd win but I gave in I lost again,
now I've got nothing left at all.
